Speaker 1: [00:00:00] [MUSIC] I think professionalism means treating other people with the respect that we believe we deserve ourselves.

Speaker 2: I think respecting everyone around you and yourself as well is paramount.

Speaker 3: I think that respect ultimately is, is what defines professionalism. Not being flaky, being conscientious and considerate, having the ability to listen.

Speaker 4: Professionalism is being yourself, but it's also ensuring that others understand that you care about their agenda. That means from the way you look, from the way that you talk, from the way that you care yourself. Professionalism is putting a stamp on your brand.

Speaker 5: Professionalism is not wasting other people's [00:01:00] time. You feel it when you're interacting with somebody. You meet them, you shake their hand, you sit down, you talk about a problem, you figure out what the next step is, you assign ownership to who's going to do what? Then you set the next date of your meeting. There's a component of that which is not only just orderliness and responsibility, but that's professionalism because you're respecting other people's time.

Speaker 6: When I think of the word professionalism, I think of the idea of self awareness. I think of someone who knows when it's appropriate to be silly at work and when it's appropriate to be serious, and someone who is also very respectful of other people's positions in the workspace.

Speaker 7: I'm not burning any bridges. The world goes round, and you want to make sure that you're not burning any bridges, so that when the world goes around and you get to work with that person again, you have a good working relationship and you can either help them or actually they can help you.

Speaker 8: Take promptness, [00:02:00] responsiveness, someone who is apathetic to the needs of people that they are working for, working with.

Speaker 9: I think professionalism means, in the context of ethics, in terms of doing a good job, in terms of being very mindful of your coworkers, delivering what you say you're going to deliver.

Speaker 10: It really comes down to being a nice person. Treat others the way you want to be treated in your professional work environment. That builds credibility. You can know everything you can in a field, but if you're a jerk, it's not going to do you a lot of good.
